Lagamur, land of adventure and peril

Lagamur was the original home of elves and dragons. They warred for thousands of years not only over their dominance of the continent, but for control of an ancient artifact known as the Orb of Power. This artifact was eventually split into two parts, the Orb of Light and the Orb of Darkness. The elves allied with the metallic dragons eventually prevailed and banished the chromatics dragons from the planes of mortals. In turn the metallic dragons left Lagamur for worlds beyond.

The elven hegemony over Lagamur was first challenged by the arrival of dwarves, and while some conflicts occurred, it was nothing compared to the wars fought between the newly arrived the humans, and elves. Elves were blamed for unleashing a magical plague upon the humans, and in turn were eventually felled by a similar plague supposedly the work of humans. Elves were even enslaved by humans for a time and slowly retreated to the Forever Forest that remained under controlled.

Humans established an empire and drove back ravenous hordes of humanoids, only to have their empire crumble as barbarians from the northern island of Nirvandia invaded Lagamur. What arose was a patchwork of small unstable kingdoms amidst which the remnants of the old empire and the Theocracy of Sunatar slowly rose as leaders.

The mortal races of Lagamur were eventually brought together during the First Draconic War when the chromatic dragons unleashed their fury once more upon Lagamur. Faced with the unrelenting advance of the dragons and their allies, elves, dwarves and humans were forced to put away their difference and ancient rivalries, and band together in order to survive. Or at least try...

"Winter falls upon Lagamur and the Draconic War comes to a standstill. The chromatic dragons control the north and the alliance between the mortal races is tenuous at best. The elves have given to the humans a secret weapon that may turn the tide in the west, but the enemy armies surround the outpost. The Company of the Dragonslayers of Karina is given the task of escaping the siege of Forgadin Fortress and carrying the weapon west. As the Dragonslayers of Karina attempts to evade the draconic armies, a second group sneaks out of the fortress. The squires and apprentices of the company escort a mysterious box across the snow covered canyons..."

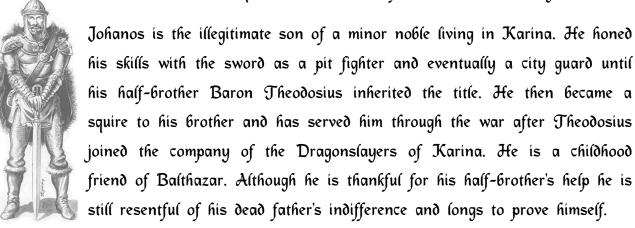

Adaliana, Priestess of Sunatar (Class- Cleric)

Adalina is a devout believer of Sunatar the Sun God. Her homeland has thus far not suffered the worst of the war and she volunteered to serve in the front lines. Her master, Bishop Numerido joined the company of the Dragonslayers of Karina, Adalina respects his decision, but she has reservations about fighting alongside non-believers.

She is devout, serious and not afraid of battle, but often underestimates those who do not follow Sunatar.

Johanos the Brave, squire to Sir Gordel of Karina (Class — Fighter)

Mithinia, Wizardess of the Magiocracy of Alicstar (Class - Magic User)

Mithinia is the apprentice to Juvenal the Warlock, Master of the Arcane School of Alicstar. She explored forbidden magics and even stole a wand, which brought great shame to her master. He accepted exile for them both to spare her life. That saved them when the Magiocracy fell. He joined the Dragonslayers of Karina when the war began. Mithinia is smart, curious and fearless, often to her detriment, but she is typically upbeat, always seeing a silver lining no matter how hard the situation may seem.

Balthazar the Fox, scout) from Karina (Class — Thief)

Balthazar grew up in the streets of Karina. He is a childhood friend of Johanos, although in their older years they grew apart. A poor orphan who grew up in the streets, Balthazar did anything he had to survive, eventually becoming a thief. When the guild master called for the assassination of Baron Theodosius, Johanos half-brother, Balthazar betrayed the thieves' guild and helped his old friend. Becoming a wanted man he joined Johanos' half-brother entourage.

Sar'Kethria, Seeker of the Wind Hunt, Archer from the Wild Forest (Class — Elf)

Sar'Kethria grew up in the Wild Forest and for most of her long life only saw humans when they foolishly attempted a raid into the ancestral home of the elves. Humans and elves have a long history of conflict but the return of dragons, which the elves fought in time ancestral, has made of them allies of necessity. Her sister and teacher Dillis'Athir joined the Dragonslayers of Karina, and Sar'Kethria has learned that the dwarves and humans she disdained for so long can be fast and loyal allies.

Jab of House Tordul, Warrior from the Iron Kingdom (Class — Dwarf)

Jab is a smith and warrior from a house aligned to the Jron Throne. He and his wife were sent along with the mission of the dwarven ambassador to the human lands.

Jab's wife joned the Dragonslayers of Karina while he worked the smiths, making weapons for the human's army; she died when the city fell and Jab left the workshop for the battlefield. Jab has lost his reason for living and throws himself into battle with abandon. He has joined this secret mission at the behest of Garrios, leader of the Dragonslayers of Karina.

Pufenios, alias Puff Puff, purveyor of hard to get items & refugee from Karina (Class — Halfling)

Pufenios, like many halflings living among humans, lived in the fringes of their settlements. His family made a modest living by trading to other halflings and Pufenios lived better than many of his kin. When his parents passed he squandered most of the family fortune and was soon destitute. He relied on cons and tricks to survive until the authorities caught him. He would have been hung for his crimes in Karina were it not for the fall if the city. Pufenios was saved by Jenessilia, halfling and member of the Dragonslayers of Karina. Impressed by her bravery, and a little smitten by her beauty, he has sworn to be a better halfling and become an adventurer.
